Spanning from the 1930s to the 1960s, Rattigan's plays capture the essence of British society during a tumultuous period of change and upheaval.

The Browning Version

This deeply moving play examines the complexities of human relationships and the power of redemption.

Flare Path

Set during the Second World War, Flare Path follows the lives of a group of women who work as controllers at an RAF station. As danger lurks around every corner, these women navigate love, loss, and the uncertainties of war. Flare Path is a stirring tribute to the resilience and courage of those who lived through the darkest of times.

While the Sun Shines

A witty and satirical comedy, While the Sun Shines explores the frivolous lives of the upper class in the shadow of impending war. Rattigan's sharp wit and keen observation of human behavior make this play a delightful and thought-provoking examination of society's flaws.

Love in Idleness

Love in Idleness is a poignant love story that follows the lives of two young people who fall in love on the cusp of a new era. As their relationship blossoms, they must navigate the challenges of societal expectations and the complexities of their own hearts.

Separate Tables

In Separate Tables, Rattigan creates a moving and insightful portrait of human loneliness and longing. The play follows the lives of a group of people who spend their evenings at a seaside hotel, each carrying their own burdens and secrets.

After The Dance
