

Ideas for a Sane World Economy

In a world facing unprecedented economic challenges, it is more important than ever to find new ideas for a sane and sustainable world economy.

The global economy is in a state of crisis. Inequality is rising, poverty is increasing, and the environment is being destroyed. The current economic system is not sustainable, and it is clear that we need to find new ways of organizing our economy.

This book offers a comprehensive collection of innovative and thought-provoking ideas that could help us create a more just and equitable global economy. The ideas in this book come from a wide range of sources, including economists, activists, and policymakers. They represent a diversity of perspectives, but they all share a common goal: to create a world economy that works for everyone.

The book is divided into five sections:

- Rethinking Growth: This section challenges the conventional wisdom that economic growth is always good. It explores alternative measures of economic progress that take into account social and environmental factors.
- Creating Jobs: This section offers ideas for creating good jobs that pay a living wage and provide workers with a sense of security.
- Reducing Inequality: This section examines the causes of inequality and proposes policies to reduce it.
- Protecting the Environment: This section discusses the need to protect the environment and offers ideas for greening the economy.
- Building a Global Economy for All: This section explores the challenges of globalization and offers ideas for creating a global economy that is more just and equitable.

The ideas in this book are not easy to implement, but they are essential for creating a more sustainable and equitable world economy. We need to start thinking outside the box and experiment with new ways of organizing our economy. The future of our planet depends on it.
